UNDERGRADS PLAN 3 FRIDAY DANCES DURING NOVEMBER

Engineers, Arts Commerce Hold Hops In Union

Three Friday-night dances in November, featuring Johnny Holmes and his orchestra, in the Ball Room of the McGill Union, will be sponsored by the Union House Committee in conjunction with the Undergrad Societies of Commerce, Engineering and Arts and Science. Tickets will be on sale to students of all faculties in the Tuck Shop of the Union, at $1.25 per couple.

The three dances are to be held on November 2, 16 and 30. The first of these, dedicated to the Commerce Undergrad Society, will have decorations in keeping with the Queen's McGill football game on the following afternoon, Saturday, November 3. On the weekend of November 16, when the Engineering Undergrad Society is featured, McGill's football squad will be out of town. Friday, November 30, is planned for the Arts and Science Undergrad Society.

Entertainment during intermission will be arranged by the respective societies' executive committees. Soft drinks, cakes, pies, and other refreshments will be available in the Grill Room of the Union while the dance is in progress in the Ball Room.

These dances have been planned by the Union House Committee, which has invited the executive bodies of the three societies of Commerce, Engineering, and Arts and Science to participate. Decorations will be mainly handled by the societies, who will put on sale a part of the tickets for their dance within their own faculty, while the larger remaining part of the tickets will be sold in the Tuck Shop. Only a limited number of tickets will be put on sale, to avoid any overcrowding.

It is planned that there will be two intermissions for each dance, during one of which refreshments will be available, while a special

Veterans Society Will Meet Today

Returned Students To Discuss Problems In Union Ballroom

The McGill Student Veterans' Society will meet at 5.15 p.m. today in the Union Ballroom; all veterans registered in the university may attend. The aims and purpose of the society will be discussed and executive officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

It is planned to submit a resolution recommending that the Federal Government grant increased allowances to veterans attending universities, and discussions will be held on means of assisting veterans who will be entering the university in January. The housing problem of student-veterans will be considered particularly in relation to married men. The opening of the old Morgan House on University street as a residence for unmarried students has helped ease the problem, but it is still acute and will be further aggravated by the influx of students in January.

Committees will be organized to help solve these and other problems. While any solution may not have any immediate benefit, it is hoped at least that they will be of assistance to students who will register at McGill in the near future.

Officials of the society said that all veterans would have a vote at the meeting, whether or not they had previously enrolled with the society. To original aims of the society have already been accomplished to considerable extent. Problems of registration, government approval, private income tax, part-time employment and special classes have been clarified, and with this success behind them, the Veterans' Society hopes for greater achievement this term.

Kentucky University Increases Enrolment

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 22.—The registrar at the University of Kentucky announces the enrolment of 2,608 students, exceeding last year's total by nearly a thousand students.

The reason given for this increase is that there are more women students enrolled now than at any other time in the history of the University. Also a selective service ruling permits men to finish the quarter or semester of work before they are drafted in addition to the enrolment of 400 veterans.

It was further stated that many girls with their war jobs finished have come back to college, with the result that, approximately one-third of the students now enrolled are men.

Lecturer Speaks At High School

Anglo-American Topic Draws Large Audience To People's Forum

"I firmly believe that the English-speaking people hold the potentialities for peace, but to gain this peace we must work together with Russia," said Evaris Scudder last night speaking at the Montreal High School under the sponsorship of the Peoples' Forum.

Mr. Scudder spoke on an American in England, dealing with the experiences which he as an American underwent in wartime Britain where he lectured under the auspices of the British Army Education Council. He was in London during both blitzes, and was himself twice bombed out of his home.

In dealing with the British election, Mr. Scudder said that one of the main reasons for the Labor victory was Churchill's attempt to frighten the voters by stating that if Labor was returned there would be a Gestapo in England, and also because the general public and particularly the worker did not trust the Conservative peace plan. He further stated that it was the service vote that assured the sweeping Socialist majority, which was surprising even to the British public.

"I say myself that the V1 and V2 weapons were far worse than the pattern bombing of the first blitz," continued Mr. Scudder while talking about the blitzes. He said that during the first blitz good humor was prevalent, but nerves were frayed under the V-bomb attacks as the people realized that they were facing a weapon of extermination, which indeed it would have turned out to be, had it not been for the Allied Air Forces.

In conclusion, Mr. Scudder praised the remarkable cooperation between the Western Allies and expressed the hope that it would continue in peace.

McGill's Architecture Students Exhibit at Civic Art Gallery

By DUSTY VINEBERG

The freshness of vision manifested by the McGill students in the school of Architecture is a unifying factor of their current exhibition which opened last Thursday at the Art Gallery of Montreal. Modern living as envisioned by these students is a practical answer to our depressingly low standard of living. Sweden, the home of planned housing and public health, must have been moved to action decades ago by just such blueprints of houses "for cheerful living," and by similar plans for community buildings and art centres. The emphasis on modern living and the contemporary approach to sociological problems through planned communities and approved housing are realized by these young architects. Their work is a significant product of these trends.

Two of the more spectacular of the projects were the work of

Allan Knight Lectures About Sports Writing

At a meeting of cub reporters in the Union ballroom at 5 p.m. yesterday, Allan Knight lectured to the students about sports writing and the part it plays in a newspaper.

He outlined the points necessary to a good sports article and particularly mentioned that those who wish to be sports writers should have a fundamental knowledge of them. He said that this knowledge is essential as the readers' interest lies in a true representation of the sport written about. He also pointed out that a good sports writer sticks to the rules of good news-writing.

Two Scholarships Offered Women

Canadian Federation Of University Women Sponsor of Awards

The Canadian Federation of University Women is offering two opportunities for study in the form of a travelling scholarship and a junior scholarship to any woman holding a degree from a Canadian University, who is not more than 25 years old and domiciled in Canada at the time of the award.

The value of the two awards is respectively $1,250 and $850, and character, intellectual ability and promise are the bases on which contestants will be adjudged. The plan of study must be approved, and preference will be given to those students who have been studying at one university, and wish to continue at another.

Application forms may be obtained from the convenor of the Scholarship Committee, and certain forms and transcripts of records submitted.

Successful candidates are bound not to accept any other award, nor to deviate from the course of study outlined in their application. The monies will be paid in advance, in two instalments, although the second one may be withheld if the mid-term report is not satisfactory. Further information may be obtained at the Registrar's office.

Victory Loan Drive Is Begun at Dawson

St. Johns, Oct. 22.—Dawson College launched its Victory Loan campaign today with Dr. Gillson's appointment of Mr. Em Orlick as director. In an interview with a Daily reporter, Mr. Orlick stated that his committee hopes to reach its high objective in two weeks on account of the large number of ex-service-men who are receiving gratuities from the government.

The official salesmen are a trio of student veterans: William A. Connelly, Andre Laporte, Gus Kirner. Mrs. C. Cook heads the advisory committee, while Lyon Nathanson and Bill Brooks form the advertising committee. Dawson students are asked to await the official canvassers, or to visit the Victory Loan headquarters located in the G.I.S. building, northwest wing office.

The Dawson campus slogan is: "Hold it! Don't buy that Victory bond in town; Dawson has its own campaign with a heavy objective."

A number of interested students, with the sanction of the Students' Executive Council, have formed a committee to lay tentative plans, and will hold a meeting tomorrow, at 5 p.m., in the Union Ballroom. The purpose of the meeting is to ascertain whether enough students are interested to warrant the time, money and effort necessary to stage such a revue.

Students Plan Aid For Jap Canadians

Prejudiced Feeling Must Be Eliminated To Benefit Situation

Toronto, October 22.—(CUP)—Don Franco, chairman of a committee formed to promote student interest in the deportation problem of Japanese-Canadians, stated that the student body must be more informed on this subject in order to express its disapproval of the measures which have been adopted.

At a meeting of executives representing over a score of undergraduate societies, Rev. James Finlay stated that the sensible policy put forth by Prime Minister Mackenzie King is not being followed because of the outspoken objections of British Columbia M.P.'s. These, however, do not represent the feelings of West Coast people. Anti-Japanese feeling, he declared, is the expression of a general race hatred, and must not be allowed to become rampant.

Mrs. Hugh MacMillan, chairman and secretary of the Cooperative Committee on Japanese-Canadians, at the same meeting, stated that Ottawa had informed the committee that the government could adopt a fair policy only when the public was trained to accept the Japanese-Canadians. The necessary training of public opinion, she continued, becomes the task of the committee and of all interested bodies.

Dawson's Orchestra Begins Rehearsals

St. Johns, Oct. 22.—A Dawson College dance orchestra has been formed, it was announced today, under the leadership of Bill Conolly, Eng. I, consisting mainly of experienced amateur musicians, who intend to play for coming College dances.

The students who are practising now will form the nucleus of a later full orchestra and consist of four trumpets, a reed section of four, and four rhythm instruments. The aggregation is now in search of a few clarinets, a public address system and a vocalist. By Christmas the boys expect to be more organized and to be able to provide first class entertainment for Dawson students. Having had two practices the boys are confident that with more experience they will be able to turn out a fine orchestra.

HANDICRAFT CLASSES START TODAY

The first class in leather work will begin tonight, Oct. 23 at 7.30 p.m. at R.V.C. in Room 1.

The courses in plastics and weaving, which are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday respectively, will take place at the same time and place.

300 Hear Hon. James MacDonald Speak on Jewish Refugee Problem

About 300 people heard Hon. James G. MacDonald, former League of Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, speak on "Palestine and the Post-War World" in the Union Ballroom last night. The address and the open discussion forum which followed it were sponsored by the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, the Hillel Foundation, and the Student Christian Movement of McGill University and the speaker was introduced by Prof. R. Tuck of the Department of Economics and Political Science.

"The humanitarian, political, and moral problems created by the Hitler regime's persecution of European Jews will tax the best heads of the world's governments," said Mr. MacDonald. "If the world's governments, in the years 1934-1936, had ordered Hitler to cease his persecution policies," he

C.O.T.C. Enrolment Shows Marked Slump

Halifax, Oct. 23.—(CUP)—According to a report from Dalhousie's C.O.T.C. and U.N.T.D., there have been no enlistments as yet since the beginning of the college year.

A statement issued by Major Faulkner, C.O. of the Dalhousie Corps, said that the only interest has been shown by army veterans, many of whom saw service overseas. Although there have been no new volunteers in the U.N.T.D. this year, members who signed up previously for three years, are still attending training programs.

Changes have been made in the training syllabus, which include three hours of training instead of six, and the place of instruction changed from University property to Naval property.

Redmen Oppose Varsity Teams In Two Meets

Four debaters to represent McGill University at the coming inter-collegiate event with the University of Toronto will be chosen tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

The debate itself will be held on Nov. 26, with one team going to Toronto and debating over a CBC network from Convocation Hall, and the other team welcoming Toronto speakers here in Montreal. The topic will be "Canadian Immigration," and although the Resolution has not been officially worded, contestants tonight are asked to speak for five minutes either for or against opening Canada's doors to large scale immigration.

The four speakers will be chosen on the basis of delivery, content, audience appeal, and the ability to convince. Judges have been named, and these are Professor Culliton of the Department of Economics, Charles Wassermann, Editor-in-Chief, McGill Daily, and a third, a member of the English Department, yet to be named.

Debating activities were limited at this and other universities during the war years because of travelling restrictions. With the easing of these war-time regulations, however, McGill University Debating Union Society, under a new executive, has taken the initiative in contacting other Canadian and American Colleges to resume competitions of a pre-war nature. Letters have been coming in from debating societies in Middlebury College, and the Inter-University Debating League, with a membership of eight Canadian Universities. Plans have been drawn up for a full year's activities, in order to give students an opportunity to discuss pertinent post-war problems with other student bodies.

Recognizing the desire on this campus for interfaculty debates, presidents of the various faculties have been contacted, and will appoint chairmen to represent them on a Standing Committee of the Society. The first regular organization

The Red and White Revue

During the last few days plans have been under way to revive McGill's famous Red and White Revue. Until the past war put a sudden end to it, the production of the Revue was one of the major events on the campus. Staged and produced with the elaborate splendor of a professional revue, the 'Red and White' gave countless students an opportunity to become acquainted with the many phases of theatrical work. The production staff alone included committees on stage work, music, costumes, properties, scenery, lighting, makeup, publicity, program, and tickets. Then there was a large cast of musicians, actors, comedians and chorus girls. All in all some 125 students were engaged in producing the show, which was seen by more than 1800 spectators annually.

It was most unfortunate that this brilliant show which contributed so much to the formation and maintenance of a united and spirited campus, had to be suspended during the war. But now we are glad to find that students have not taken the attitude, that once dead a regular and established event cannot be revived. The committee set up by the Students' Executive Council to prepare the plans for the new Red and White Revue has called a general meeting for tomorrow afternoon, and all those who want to take part in the revival of one of McGill's great social and artistic events will be interviewed. We know that the Revue cannot be produced unless there is sufficient interest for such a venture on the campus, and we hope that tomorrow's meeting will prove to the Council and its committee that McGill's first post-war Red and White Revue can and will be produced.

Inconvenient But Necessary

Last week our attempts to write a few words in support of the Clothing Drive were mutilated by a strange Composing Room Gremlin. In the meantime the Drive has been extended for this week, and so we find ourselves editorializing once again on the virtues of this undertaking. According to the committee in charge the results of the Drive have not been altogether gratifying. We attribute this failing to two factors: firstly, a lot of students have already been approached through the city campaign, and have thus run out of old clothes to give away; secondly, unless we are reminded of something every day and every night, we are inclined to forget it, particularly if it entails being seen by the watchful opposite sex, walking along Sherbrooke street or sitting in a bus, clutching a bundle of old clothes; — we consider this a disgrace, and we make every attempt either to skip such an occurrence altogether, or to cover the fateful bundle with lab coats, loose-leaf books, or whatever else comes in handy. And then too, it is much more comfortable to come down to lectures in the morning without being loaded with unnecessary baggage. But on the other hand, may we remind our readers here, that all these inconveniences, recognized as they are, can hardly be compared with the inconvenience of having to survive a European winter without clothes? Europe today is an enormous cesspool of wreckage; its people are bewildered, disorganized and hungry... let us not add to their misery by forgetting to bring a few pieces of clothing to the collection boxes in the campus

The Clothing Drive Is Still On....

(Clothes are still badly needed... needed by people such as the Hollander who wrote this story. It is those such as he who are living in the ruins of what was once a prosperous continent. These people have courage; there are stories such as this to prove it. They have the courage to start all over again in the rebuilding of their homes, but they cannot possibly manage this without some sort of help. They need clothes, clothes that we can supply.)

The Liberation of Hans

(As told to his mother)

It was two years ago that I tried to escape from Hanover where we had been put to clearing up dumps where the ruins of houses stood. I hung on under a freight car and got to the boundary where the Netherlands began. Just before we pulled into the station I crept out and got past the station all right — when they saw me and asked for my papers.

I was taken before a German official and he asked me what I was doing there on the border. I told him I was trying to get to Holland as my pride as a Hollander prevented me from working for my enemy. He then said:

"You are an enemy of Germany?"

I answered "Yes."

"We will soon teach you to be wiser!" he said.

I was put in prison, and our rations were a piece of bread in the morning — thin soup in the afternoon and in the evening — one piece of bread at night. It was cold weather and we had to get up from the floor — where we lay in a cell — and then undress and walk about naked for half an hour. After which, the bread — then — hard work until dark again.

We had to pound stones and carry heavy loads and were beaten and kicked about constantly. Many of the political prisoners had dysentery and I myself had it a short time from soup and bread with maggots in it. Some of the prisoners were dying on their feet.

After a time I was sent under guard to Nienburg where I was out to work again cleaning up dumps. One day they caught me drawing on a small piece of paper and knowing that I was a student of engineering at Delft University in Holland, they forced me to draw sketches of their machines. I used to dauble over these and say they were not ready. This got me into much hot water, of course.

Then too — the nights were cold and we had but thin blankets and lay on straw in a small barracks. We were eaten up by vermin and nearly went crazy with them.

We were constantly watched by the German police who hated us, and if peace had not been signed when it was and we quickly away from that dangerous spot — we would have been caught and shot assuredly.

Germany is completely demoralized and they are having a time to get used to the idea that things have not gone as they thought. Death and doom — fire and cannon have demolished their country. Water is scarce and people sometimes have to go miles for water. They liked all people who approved of their regime, — but they hated all of us. — It is good to be back home again!

Time and Tide

What Would He Have Said

What would he have said when the first atomic bomb fell on Hiroshima? What would he have said as people stared open-mouthed at the headlines, screaming the arrival of another weapon of destruction? What would he have been his reaction to the enormity of the field thrown wide open by the application of nuclear physics?

He would not have been very amazed, and his astonishment would be for his own accuracy rather than for the even which occurred, for you see, he knew. Over a century he knew... and he told people he knew, not only this, but many other things.

He was something of a prophet, this man, and his past judgments have been rather sound, for you see his name was Lord Alfred Tennyson and in 1842 he wrote:

For I dipt into the future,
Far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world,
And the wonder that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce,
Argosies of magic sails,
Pillots of the purple twilight,
Dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting,
And there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations airy navies
Grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper
Of the south-wind rushing warm,
With the standard of the peoples
Plunging through the thunder storm;

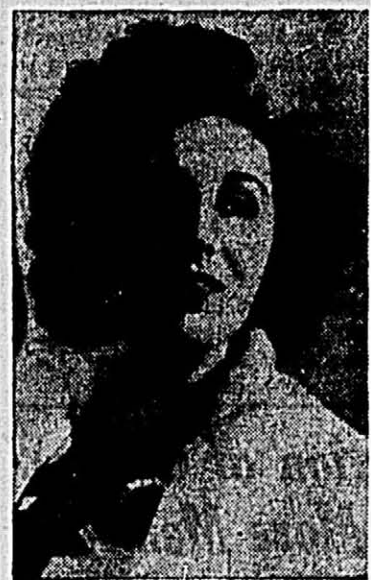

Till the war drum throbbed no longer,
And the battle flags were furled
In the Parliament of man,
The Federation of the world.

buildings. Some have already helped. Others are really unable to do so. But we feel that many students could still have another look in their cupboards and produce some article of clothing; great would be the thanks of those who would rather wear, or clutch rags than freeze to death.

Guest Artists on Campus

THE MCGILL STRING QUARTET

ELLEN BALLON

These are the artists the students will have the opportunity of hearing, seeing in person and very possibly meeting during the winter Subscription Concert Series held at R.V.C.

They are well known artists and have proven their worth in the city already. Regina Resnik, dramatic soprano, sang here soon after winning her contract with the Metropolitan Opera Company; Isaac Stern played here last winter in the France Film series. Both Ellen Ballon and the McGill String Quartet, being of Montreal origin, have been heard here many times before.

Season tickets are on sale at the janitor's office in the Arts Building, at the Tuck Shop in the Union and from faculty representatives.

Georges Duhamel Lectures

Speaking of France, at his lecture at Plateau Hall last night, Georges Duhamel showed how she fulfilled the only, the all important requisite of a Great Nation: France has today working and creating in all branches of art and science, a host of great men. The list of famous men he cited was overwhelming, almost incredible when one remembered that he was limiting his choice to men he had known in his own lifetime. Georges Duhamel is 61 years old; the names he cited numbered more than a hundred.

After enduring two modern wars within one single generation—both fought on her soil — France still holds one of the chief places in world culture. The conscious fight for this continuous excellence was not stressed by Mr. Duhamel; he seemed to take it as a matter of course. Yet to us it seems admirable that all through the dark years of the occupation, when men's thoughts should by right have been busy with the bare necessities of living, that especially then her young artists should have been encouraged and protected. Scholarships were given, these accepted, degrees conferred, and above all, the peace time group of literary magazines were published. The French like to feel a new generation of talented youth continually taking the places of those who have fulfilled their destiny, whose fame has been already established.

We cannot take the roll call of famous modern Frenchmen here; there would be no room. Yet we must mention the divisions under which Mr. Duhamel grouped them. Briefly, he divided them into novelists, essayists, critics, playwrights, philosophers, directors and producers, painters, sculptors, engravers, scientists, doctors, physicists, chemists, architects.

More important than these are the young men of today, whose names are still unknown. They are trying, experimenting, creating new modes of expression. This is the thing that matters most of all: that France is still growing at her usual magnificent pace, surpassing her former achievements, in perpetual evolution.

People often forget that France between the wars did not confine her effort only to the arts. Georges Duhamel talked of the roads of France, of her railways, the most rapid in Europe, of the "Normandie", once the biggest ship in the world. He talked of the "Mysteres Francals", of the French spirit, the small ceremonies that only the French can understand, receptions at the Academie Francalse, the beautiful geometric gardens, the French wines, the inventive spirit that could be found always in otherwise prosaic occupations.

He told us to love France for what she is, a Great Nation, still leading in all fields of culture and knowledge in spite of all adversity. Martyrized, impoverished, France is still great because she chooses to be so.

Mr. Duhamel emphasized that one cannot love a country while consciously disliking its people. He asked us to accept the French as they are.

REGINA RESNICK

the discussion arising out of the suggestion of Messrs Forrest and Pratt, on the subject of political clubs on the campus.

I am a veteran of this war and this is my second session at McGill. I do not belong to any political party, but I am interested in the future of my country and its healthy operation as a democratic state.

Political parties are essential instruments of the operation. The greater the number of people who are actively interested in political parties the better will the operation of Parliamentary Democracy then be. Thus each additional person who participates in the function of a political party, increases by that much, i.e. increasing public control of the parties, the possibility of better functioning of government.

It is therefore not too much to begin such interests, in university, where we are learning our duties of citizenship and leadership.

As it is, certain political ideologies are already well defined on the campus, but they masquerade under loose titles. Political operation by subterfuge is not healthy, nor is it a feature of democracy. Why not come out and operate as bona fide political clubs and operate in the view of all, only that English language words do not further lose their meanings.

Further, is it not a question of the freedom to associate, how, when and where one wishes, which is a feature of democracy? If they are not wanted, they will die a natural death. In the meantime live and let live, they can do no harm, and in the other hand they may fashion future instruments of democracy. Such has been the case at many other universities of which Oxford is the best example with its Reform and Carlton clubs, which are permanent features of the campus there.

Political clubs will satisfy a need not provided by mere discussion groups, that is active participation along lines determined by your free will and natural inclination. I am in favour of the formation of political clubs on the campus.

Finally I want to add that such attacks as the one authored by W. A. MacDonald in this column, introducing personal venom, which in turn has no bearing on the point, add not a single thing to the discussion, are repugnant to the estate of most people, and can only reflect upon the author.

John A. MACDONALD.

Dear Sir,—In this column two undergraduates recently asked that political clubs be formed for all parties on the campus. For this suggestion, evidently a mortal sin, and for their personal support of the C.C.F., a certain Mr. MacDonald has rushed into the fray. "Messrs. Forrest and Pratt," and all other C.C.F.'ers, are, it seems, atheists, isolationists, and disgruntled. Athelists, no doubt, because a large number of Canadian clergymen have seen fit openly to support the C.C.F. Isolationists, evidently, because the C.C.F. saw before any other group, the coming Fascist menace in Europe and Japan, and advocated support for the Spanish and Chinese before most people were aware that World War II was upon us. They are disgruntled, in his mind, because to the MacDonalds of this world all people who contend that this earth could be improved, and offer constructive ideas for improving it, are disgruntled and malcontent.

What Mr. MacDonald's letter amounts to is a prolonged exploitation of that old political expedient, the partial quote. It stands as a convincing proof that the art of hyperbole is not dead.

It would be tedious, but not difficult, to refute his assertions and interpret correctly his oft-misquoted references. But argument would perhaps be wasted on a man who, because he can find two atheist socialists in the last thirty years, feels that joining the C.C.F. is a renunciation of any religious belief.

I know two Liberals who happen to be janitors, but I would not debate politics with the ridiculous parallel contention that all Liberals are by definition janitors. Rather, I point to his letter as proof of C.C.F. integrity. Religious pervers and various assorted orders of fanatics have gleaned the Bible in a manner similar to the Right Wing's scrupulous examination of C.C.F. literature. They have been able to find in the Bible verses that seemingly excused slavery, heavy drinking, regal absolutism, and other obvious iniquities. No sane person, however, would condemn the Bible as a disseminator of irreligious thought.

In the same manner, C.C.F. books have been read and re-read for the slightest misinterpretable comment. Most of Mr. MacDonald's quotations are over ten years old. If he can find so little fodder to work on since then, I consider that the C.C.F.'s purity of ideal has been complimented. A sensible criticism of the C.C.F. would be based on its official programme as stated in its platform, and not on this medley of snips, bits, and clippings that the Right Wing have dug out of all the innumerable volumes of socialist literature.

And as for the political societies, I think that Mr. MacDonald's letter shows the need for them. We should all resolve to learn more about the other parties as well as our own. Doing this, we would take more stock in sound political discussion and have no truck with

Red Netmen Assume Early Lead in Tennis Play

Rain Halts Net Play After Bob Duford Wins Opening Match 6-2, 6-4

University of Montreal, Varsity To Continue Tournament Today

By BUD MARSH

The gala resumption of Intercollegiate tennis turned into a "gail-a" yesterday afternoon as the rain came down in torrents after about one hour of spirited play. Only one match, the Bob Duford vs. Yvon Pepin set-to, was completed, and the players had no sooner walked off the court when the rains came. Unless a minor miracle occurs, the matches will be finished at the Montreal Indoor Tennis Club.

McGill was scheduled to oppose the University of Montreal netmen yesterday, with Toronto squaring off against the boys from l'Universite today, and McGill encountering Varsity on Wednesday. These were the plans, but the best laid plans of mice and men... As it stands now, the Varsity racquetters will meet the Flying Frenchmen today indoors, and if possible, a few of yesterday's tilts will be completed.

DUFORD WINS

Holding down the spotlight hier apres midi (this is for the benefit of our French friends) was the clash between Montreal's Yvon Pepin and McGill's Bob Duford, number one men for their respective teams. Duford took a commanding 4-0 lead at the beginning and held this margin to take the first set, 6-2. Trailing 4-3 in the second set, Bob settled down to some brilliant playing and ran through the next three games to take the set and match, 6-2, 6-4. Duford's backhand was superb; most of his forcing shots came from the port side, and this seemed to have Pepin worried no little.

Pepin was not given much of a chance to bring his famed forehand into action, although he did uncork a few shots that brought rounds of applause from the railbirds. The conclusion of the match was met with thunderous applause, and we do mean thunderous, as the rain began to come down in buckets.

RAIN PREVAILS

All of the other matches were in the second set when the rain put a damper to the contestants' spirits. Colin Ramsey, apparently suffering from a case of tournament jitters, dropped the first to Bernard Beaudoin in jig-time without being able to garner a single game. Coming back strongly, Ramsey was leading 4-0 in the second set when play was interrupted.

Jack Spencer took the first set from opponent Langevin 6-4, but was trailing 5-4 in the next at the conclusion of play. Both Harry Chin Yee and Breen Marlen were about even with their respective opponents, Theault and Clerk.

If the weather clears sufficiently to allow the courts to dry, tomorrow's matches, featuring Varsity and McGill, will be run off at the MacTavish street courts.

Tigers Face Grads In Game Tomorrow

McGill Twelve Loses Two Outstanding Players For Important Contest

Hot after their second victory, the McGill Tigers are championing at the bit as they prepare for their QRFU tilt tomorrow night against Verdun Grads.

Having bested their McGill rivals, the Wildcats, 18-3, the Tigers will come up against a tougher team in the Grads. The Verdun boys, mostly cast-offs of the Hornets have been training under Ewart Jones and will have several tricks up their sleeves.

STARS MISSING

The Tigers will be minus several of their key players for this important tilt. Red McCavour, stellar end, will not be able to play. In the opening game, the speedy red-head twisted his knee and will be out of football for the rest of the season. More grievous even than this loss, is the news that Bartlett, their star backer, has been elevated to the senior squad, by virtue of his showing against the Wildcats. This leaves Coach Bennett with a problem but he feels he can rely on Greatrix to bear the brunt of the load. Moreover Johnny Ballon, who has been added to the team's roster will aid in that department.

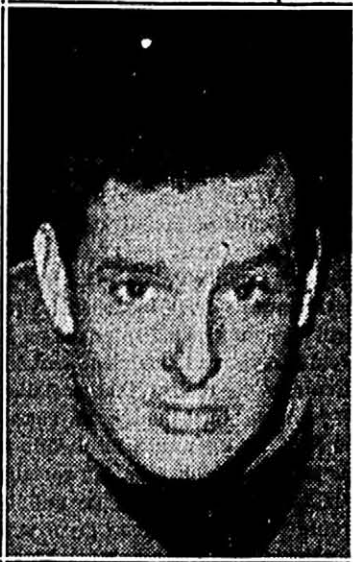

Football Special Arranged For London Trip Saturday

The McGill Football specials, which have been dormant during the war years, began again with a bus trip to London this Saturday.

For a grand sum of $18.90 return, McGill students have the opportunity of going to Western to cheer their favorites in a return match. Remembering the defeat absorbed by our team last Saturday, many are expected to go along in the hope of seeing revenge exacted from the Western squad. Three cheerleaders are to make the journey as well in one of the first manifestations of McGill spirit this year.

No reservations may be made but those who are interested are asked to sign the lists which will be posted in the Arts, Biology, Medical and Engineering Buildings. The busses leave Montreal at 9.00 p.m. Friday and return Sunday at noon.

HERON HIS CHEST

Yes, there really is hair on the chest of DOUG HERON, stalwart middle, who was a tower of strength on the McGill line last Saturday. (McGill Daily—B. Sabloff)

On Saturday, the Wildcats, McGill's other QRFU entry, will play Verdun Grads at Brown's Stadium in Verdun.

PAGING BYRON NELSON

The Troubles of a Golfer As Seen by a Satirist

Golf is a form of work made expensive enough for a rich man to enjoy. It is the physical and mental exertion made attractive by the fact that you have to change for it in a $100,000 clubhouse.

Golf is what letter carrying, ditch digging, and carpet beating would be if these three tasks had to be performed on the same hot afternoon in short pants and coloured socks by a gouty-looking gentleman who requires a different implement for every mood.

SIMPLE

Golf is the simplest looking game in the world when you decide to take it up and the toughest looking after you have been at it for 10 or 12 years.

It is probably the only known game that a man can play as long as a quarter of a century and then discover that it was too deep for him in the first place.

The game is played on carefully selected grass with little white balls and as many clubs as the player can afford. These balls cost from $0.75 to $25 and it is possible to support a family of ten (all adults) for five months on the money represented by balls lost by some golfers in a single afternoon.

A golf course has eighteen holes seven of which are unnecessary and put in to make the game harder. A hole is a tin cup in the center of a "green". A "green" is a small parcel of grass costing about $1.98 a blade and usually located between a brook and a couple of apple trees or a lot of unfinished excavations.

THE IDEA

The idea is to get the golf ball from a given point into each of the eighteen cups in the fewest strokes possible and the greatest number of words.

The ball must not be thrown, pushed or carried. It must be propelled by about $200 worth of curious looking implements, especially designed to provoke the owner. Each implement has a specific purpose and ultimately, some golfers get to know what the purpose is. They are the exceptions.

"After each hole has been completed, the golfer counts his strokes. Then he subtracts six and says, "Made that in five." "That's one over par. Shall we play for fifty Continued on Page Four

Red Trackmen Prep for Meet This Friday

Dinner Scheduled For Cinders Squad This Evening

The fourth event in the return of intercollegiate competition will see track and field teams from Queen's, Western and Toronto Universities. Competing with a Redmen team at Molson Stadium this Friday, Oct. 26. The last such meet was held in 1939 and saw McGill running and jumping off with the honors.

Toronto is definitely the team to beat this year, so McGill will have its hands full out-tracking the Queen City aggregation, if the result from their recent meet are any indication of coming events.

RED SQUAD

Nevertheless the results of McGill's meet held last week show that the Red and White team stand a good chance of upholding the precedent made by their progenitors in 1939. Although Arts and Science representatives piled up the most points in the meet, the boys from Dawson College showed their heels to good effect by coming a close second-and this after only about a week's training. With another week of conditioning under their belts the St. John Students should do even better.

However, the McGill team will Toronto a run for their money with such men as Brewerton, who came quite close to a record in the 220 low hurdles, Lefcoe in the high and broad jumps, Eddie Ballon, who led the pack in the long-distance jaunts, and Gillespie, McDowall and Pennyfather in the middle-distances.

DINNER TONIGHT

A dinner will be served for the McGill Track Team, tonight at 6.30, in the Grill Room of the Union Bldg. The following men are invited: J. Shanahan, Glen, Clough, Knecht, Morgan, Urquhart, Pennyfather, Gillespie, McDowall, Lamontagne, Bradford, Ballon, Farmer, Brewerton, Van Wagner, Wilkinson, Frank, Kubina, Bartlett, Paquette, Lefcoe, Rider and Higgins.

The meal tickets will either be given at the Union or the men can get them from Bill Reid. This dinner will give a chance to the team to get together in a different atmosphere than on the track, and will also give them a chance to rest their legs and forget their diets for one evening.

Pilgrim's Progress Abets American Olympic Team

Have you ever heard of Paul Pilgrim? Probably not because his name appears in the Olympic records of 1906. There is a very good reason why Paul Pilgrim's only listing on the records is for the double win at the Olympics of 1906—said reason being that they are the only track titles he ever won.

He did win a part of a national title as the fifth member of the New York Athletic Club Cross Country team to cross the finish line many years ago. And he has earned a permanent place in sports as athletic director of the Winged Foot since 1914. But his quick glimpse of glory 39 years ago in what is now war-torn Greece comprises one of the freak tales of all sports history.

BASKETBALL STAR

Paul Pilgrim was a basketball player in grammar school, would have remained one had not a capricious coach decided he might do better as a half miler. So, at New York Military Academy, he became

Dawson College Quintet Prepare for Season's Play

At the third official basketball practice held yesterday afternoon, of the team which is to represent Dawson College in the Montreal Intermediate League this year, Jerry Leonard's squad was narrowed down to twelve from the original sixty prospects. "By the next practice," said Jerry, "we'll be down to the ten men who will be on the representative team this year."

At the moment, eight men are sure to make the grade, but their names will not be announced until the next practice, to be held tomorrow. Jerry hopes to find two other men from among those prospective basketballers now playing football. The team's prospects are quite good, and Jerry expects it to be among the first three in the league.

M.O.C. Summer Review

by Canoer

During the past summer the traditions established by the McGill Outing Club the previous year were carried on to new and greater heights. Many canoe trips were staged from Ste. Rose up and down the river going sometimes as far as the Lake of Two Mountains and bicycle trips were run to various points, some as far as Ottawa.

Canoe Trips

Concerning the canoe trips, we usually left Montreal at the crack of dawn and arrived at Ste. Rose just in time to get the usual barges or to be informed that the wind was blowing too strong for paddling on the river. Then an argument ensued with the boatman who, as it turned out, was more concerned for his canoes than he was for us. When the pretty Co-eds had finally convinced the boatman that the he-men from McGill would take personal care of his dilapidated canoes, we set out looking for obstructions in the river in order to completely disillusion him. Due to the muddy condition of the water we were thoroughly successful.

Manor Hawaii

The first stopping place, beside those made for changing the layout on the bottom of the river, is known as the Manor Hawaii. There are a number of attractions here. The water in the river becomes crystal clear and it is possible to swim about without getting tangled.

"Be Confident and You Will Win on Saturday," Is Opinion Voiced by Coach Kerr and Board

"Beyond any shadow of a doubt this team can be as good as any Kerr coached team in 20 years. All the boys need is confidence in themselves. McGill must go in there grimly determined to play as well the last 59 minutes as they do the first." With these words Coach Doug Kerr summed up his impressions of the first game of the season.

END-RUNS AND REVERSES

Never once scolding the boys, but rather pointing out their errors, Kerr maintained that the team can beat Western if they can master the Mustangs' end-runs or reverses. For two hours at the training table, the noted mentor proceeded to show how he would do it. This cannot be revealed—military secrets and all that. Kerr however, maintained that this is the first time in eight years that the McGill line was outplayed. This was excusable however because of the injury to Telford, the absence of Little and this was the first game that Barclay and Heron had played in the middle slot in years.

Kerr said the team will leave Montreal Friday night arriving in London at 12.30. Lights out will be at 1.15. Saturday holds a treat in store for the boys with breakfast in bed at 9.00 a.m.

REVISION

In preparation for the big game Kerr will revise the team defense and the end run. Wednesday's scrimmage will be highlighted by these new tactics. Moreover out for the first time on a senior team will be big Bartlet who amazed with his kicking Friday night. Doug Bulloch will join him in the senior locker room.

Kerr maintains that McGill has been noted for her end-runs. These were piled up but at the expense of weakening the line and so the line plunges worked. No team can watch all sections carefully and McGill will be watching for her opening.

The on-side kick which McGill tried twice from the kick-off barely missed completion. However nearly is not completely and so the kickers of the squad will be out practicing all week for the coming event.

Though McGill will go into London definite underdogs, there are quite a few, including the Redmen board of strategy, who would not be surprised to see a victory.

Y.M.H.A. snapped Georgians' two-game win streak by eking out a 37-30 win in a senior M.B.L. cage game played at the Y.M.H.A. courts on Saturday night. In the intermediate tilt played prior to the senior game, Y.M.H.A. handed Canadian Legion No. 97 a, 36-15, drubbing.

Georgians were giving the Y.M.H.A. squad a tough battle but the latter's smooth playing gave them an advantage. Y.M.H.A. took the lead, and at the half time mark was leading by two points, 19-17. They continued to extend their lead through the second half. Top Y. scorer was Abe Dikof-exhibition galleries, offices, and an auditorium of 730 seats. The auditorium wing is to contain a projection room, dance studio, workshop, and an outdoor stage. Mr. Yoe-man's plans include rather more extensive game space; his plans devote an entire wing to deck games, and call for a study-library and club rooms.

An ultra-modern "Pavillon du Bois" planned to house an international exposition may be compared to New York's Museum of Modern Art, and two plans for "A Room for Civil Marriages" are exhibited. They are, perhaps, excellent architecturally, but their appeal to women in singularly small. A three-months problem, divided among seven students resulted in a planned community intended to accommodate approximately 2,500 people. Shops, garages, a heating plant, community building, and nursery school were features of the plan.

Two pedestaled abstractions constructed with coloured glass, slate, mirror, wire screening, lucite, metal shavings, tiling, copper rings, and insulated plywood, drew an amusing anecdote from a cautious member of the public who was carefully surveying the exhibition. It appeared that several years ago in Scotland, when he had been admiring the paintings and museum pieces in Edinburgh castle, one mysterious curiosity had attracted the attention of a group of fellow sightseers who could not understand the inclusion of so strange an artistic phenomenon, or so they believed in the castle collection. Our observer later discovered the strange object to be an instrument for cleaning the armour of the mediaeval figures in the castle museum. This wary gentleman consequently declined to pause in front of these strange constructions, which held considerable fascination for the average individual.

The frescos, pieces of sculpture, and illuminations owe their inclusion in the exhibition to the fact that they were projects undertaken by students in architecture for the purpose of developing their appreciation of form, and of other arts closely allied with their own. Among the miscellanea were a number of paintings on plaster, or frescos, as they are commonly called, in the manner of ancient Egypt. Two or three plaster figures recall the mediaeval monks and friars, and approximately half a dozen illuminated manuscripts imitate those of the Middle Ages. One wall of the exhibition is devoted to the results of the summer sketching school, which opens two weeks before regular classes. There is a sketch of the typical delapidated little summer shack up north; and various watercolours of town and country.

Whether or not the work of these students is to find an outlet when they leave university depends upon public interest, and demand for a high standard of living, for the exhibition is significant indication of the vision of young Canada. It will be on view until Monday, October 23.

Before the war, the Red and White Review was an annual affair. Sponsored by the Students' Executive Council, it took in general, the form of a musical comedy or variety show, and ran for five days. Such a production entails a great deal of work, and can only be successful if the student body as a whole gives it the maximum of support.

Actual musical or dramatic talent is not the only thing required. While that is definitely necessary and the committee is anxious to discover just how much talent we have in McGill, the most important factor in a presentation of this sort is interest.

A large-scale production like the Revues of the past requires an enormous amount of energy, and a great number of people with the will to work is needed for the production staff. Therefore, students with stage talent, back-stage, costume or make-up experience, as well as those with no particular experience, but who are willing to help out in any way, are needed.

Of most importance, the business meetings will include reports from each college on the project which was proposed for them during this term: Dalhousie is studying the medical curriculum Laval and Montreal have assumed the great task of translation so that all CAMSI publications may be bilingual; McGill publishes the CAMSI Journal, and is interested in financial aid to undergraduates; Western Ontario has performed the valuable task of cataloguing medical films for educational purposes; Queens is studying the organization of AMSI; Toronto is concerned with our relations with the Canadian Medical Association; the Canadian Intern Board, and post-grad-

PETER SCOTT, Arts I.

POLITICAL CLUB

To The Editor, McGill Daily, Sir,—May I take the privilege of replying to the informative letter of last Thursday by a true disciple of the famous should I say infamous Mr. Trestrail author of "Social Suicide."

Mr. Macdonald referred to a statement of Mr. Lewis to the effect that he (Mr. Lewis) was a socialist. This was essentially a statement of Mr. Lewis' own views and do not reflect the views of the C.C.F. as a whole. The majority of the members of the C.C.F. are ardent reformers and if some degree of social reform is necessary then it will be and should be incorporated into the election platform of the C.C.F., by a democratic decision of all C.C.F. members, despite any opposition from within or without. Mr. Lewis does not make the election platform of the C.C.F. but a vote does, this is something that can be said of only one other major party in Canada namely the "Social Credit" Party.

Perhaps the Liberal "No Conscription" platform and subsequent plebiscite were an example of the sincerity to French-Canadians in politics of which Mr. Macdonald writes.

Mr. Macdonald opposes associating Current Christianity and socialism. If the slums within a five-minute walk of McGill are an example of Christianity then for Heavens sake give us socialism in preference. Mr. Macdonald incidentally cannot be a Protestant or he would have read sufficient socialist literature to realize that socialism is practical Christianity, he cannot be R.C. or he would be unable to quote any socialist as all socialist writings are on the Index and he would be unable to read them with a clear conscience. I must therefore assume that he is a Jehovah Witness and hope that these democratic stones can drive him from his ivory tower.

Mr. Macdonald warns veterans against the C.C.F. due to its opposition to the coalition government of England. I ask any fair minded veteran is not a coalition between any people's party and the representatives of high finance ridiculous?

The paragraph regarding the C.C.F. policy on conscription at the commencement of war is most amusing when one considers that there were more pro-C.C.F. servicemen overseas in this war than there were of any other party as shown by the overseas election returns of the last Federal election.

The childish manner of picking on Prof. Scott's son, by quoting from his father's book, is a further indication of Mr. Macdonald's muddled thinking. Perhaps Mr. Scott is a little more popular than Mr. Macdonald or is making more progress with some cute co-ed, I don't know, but I do think that he could choose some other way of venting his spite than this, in any event I do believe that if Mr. Macdonald had spent less time choosing quotations from anti-C.C.F. pamphlets and had found the truth about the C.C.F. he would have had a much more logical argument. The assertion that control of inventions will return us to the age of the cave man is also ridiculous. Does our learned friend suggest for one minute that atomic energy, the greatest invention of all times, be turned over to "private enterprise"?

If he does then he can rest assured that such a course would return us to the age of the cave man and "displace" more workers than he ever dreamed existed, at a quicker pace than he had imagined possible.

For the information of Mr. Macdonald the writer of this letter is a Christian, a veteran (with overseas time), a C.C.F.er and a happy student, and is proud of each category.

Sincerely,
B. Calm.

she has ever been in the past. It has been repeatedly condemned by British and American statesmen but no action has ever been taken to change it.

The open discussion period, held after the address, was extremely lively, with three or more people often vying for the floor at once. Many interesting views on both sides of the question were presented. The relative contributions of the Arab and Jewish populations of Palestine to the winning of the war, the effect of Jewish immigration on the life of the average Arab in Palestine, the terms of the Balfour Declaration and their interpretation, were some of the points brought out and handled by Mr. MacDonald.

izational meeting of the Society will be held one week from today. On Tues. Oct. 30. The feature of the evening will be a debate between the Commerce faculty and the Engineering Debating Society, on the topic, "Resolved that in present day conditions, 'tis better to marry for money than for love." The Engineers will uphold the negative. This debate will be the first in the series of interfaculty competitions, the winner of which will be awarded the Interfaculty Debating Cup.

The Student's Executive Council has approved the increased program by placing at the disposal of the Debating Union, the largest budget in the Society's 60 year history. The Executive hopes that the student body will take advantage of this opportunity, and a large number of contestants is expected this evening.
